The Latin American Journal of International Trade Law (LATAM Journal) is an academically-led, blind peer-reviewed, bi-annual journal, which aims to publish high quality scholarship while promoting a greater understanding of the legal aspects in a multidisciplinary way considering the current economic and political world context. The focus of LATAM Journal is on law and legal studies spanning all areas of international trade including international commercial arbitration, investment arbitration, investment law & policy, and international economic law broadly.

Founded in 2012, LATAM Journal is a publication of the Postgraduate Program in Law of the National Autonomous University of Mexico (UNAM) created as a forum for the community of scholars in Latin America and beyond to take a broad inter-disciplinary approach to the study of law; thereby reaching a wide readership, including legal academics, social scientists, jurist, policy makers, students, and others.

LATAM Journal publishes manuscripts in Spanish and English in the form of academic articles; case law reviews; and books, conferences, and legislative up-date notes.
